Hector grew up in the shanties camps in Leguminas, Zulia Venezuela, adored by his siblings, Sonia Judith Marin Garcia, Nena Maribel Marin Garcia and Marlon Eduardo Marin Garcia. Hector had a passion for baseball and cars. But his primary passion was his family. Hector was the bedrock of his family. He was a devoted father, focused on teaching his boys family values and passing on his huge heart and generosity to his friends and family. As a testament to his boundless love for his boys, he never missed a local baseball game or practice. On numerous occasions, Hector drove across the nation to deliver his boys and their teams to baseball state final competitions.

Hector was a devoted son to both his Mother and Father and despite the long physical distance that separated them, Hector found time for daily calls to light up their days. Hector also financially and emotionally supported
