“ I don't even know why I'm writing to you here when you hardly even checked your Facebook. Now I see why I haven't heard from you on messenger. We seemed to run into each other or catch up every few years. You always checked on me. I thought just like we have been in the past, busy with life, work, family, relationship, kids, and I'd be hearing from you soon. I'm very sorry to find out you are no longer with us, and I won't be running into you and Carter at the park. You were the first boy my parents even let me hang out with when we were in middle school. We would listen to Green Day and make plans on what we would do when we were adults one day. When that finally happened like a lot of young friendships we went and lived life.

We kept in touch and although we both had a lot of drama we were dealing with, we could guarantee one another that everything would be ok. Very saddened to have read this news. RIP Goober. My condolences to your kids, dad, Scotty, your dad, family, and friends. I know you're at peace with your mom. 😞

“ Man brother. I just had seen you a few weeks before this. I really wish you would have told me what you where going through. I'm glad I got to pray with you before I left and I pray before you left this earth you gave your life to Jesus. Man I loved you like my own brother. You'll be missed greatly. I'm glad I was able to be a good friend of yours for many years. Rest in peace brother. Now your with your mom. Praying for the family. Thanks for all the work you put into my honda. See ya in heaven.
