“ I remember Martha, Marsha and I as kids playing at there house all the time. We were best friends, we used to eat hot sauce on bread in there kitchen , and set on the frount pouch and talk about boys. One night Marsha’s electric blanket caught on fire it was just some sparks and smoke but it scared us a LOT. we did all kinds of crazy and fun things together.And even though I haven’t seen or talk to Martha in many years I have always thought of her as a best friend from my childhood. I’m sure she has been a wonderful wife, mother and grandmother and best friend to many others in her life.
