“ Hi Mami,

Just sitting here in my room thinking about you and wishing you were here. I miss you so much. Mother's Day was on the 11th and I was so sad and angry that we weren't celebrating you and everything that you did for our family. Papi and I talk about you all the time. It makes us sad but it's what we're left with. Sending you all my love. 🙏🏻🙏🏻❤️

It's been 2 years, and it still feels like yesterday. The void in my heart feels split wide open, and I don't know where to put all the love that I have for you. I miss you terribly, and there's so much I want to say, and let out but I don't know how without you. I hope you feel the immense love I have for you, for all that you did. I don't think I said it enough but I'm grateful for the life we had, no matter how difficult it got, we made it through, and I have you to thank for that. You never gave up, and I won't give up because you didn't. I love you and miss you, and I will continue to carry you in my heart forever.

Today is April 29th, 2023, and tomorrow April 30th is my college graduation ceremony. I did it! 4 years have flown by at SNHU, but your baby girl officially has her bachelor's degree. There have been many times when I wanted to quit school, mainly when you were sick. But instead, I used it as my focus to keep me from breaking down; it only helped sometimes. But I am officially a graduate, and I know that you are proud of me. I can feel you all around me, especially in my heart. I miss you so much, and I would give anything to have you here and watch me walk that stage. I LOVE YOU AND MISS YOU. UNTIL WE MEET AGAIN.

“ Bendicion Mami,

It's February 20th, 2023, and this is my last week of school. After Sunday, I don't have any more classes. I am just waiting until graduation. I miss you SO MUCH, and I'm disheartened and angry with the world that you're not here. You always told me that you were proud of me for returning to school, and that's been the motivation I've been using to finish since you passed. But the closer the date gets, the more I wish you could be here to see me grab that diploma in my hands and finally make it official. I still carry you in my head, heart, and soul; no matter what, I know I'll see you again someday. Until the next post, I love you, mami. Say hi to Mother and Abuelita for me.

I woke up today with the heaviest feeling in my chest, and while I have some time alone, all I've been doing is crying. I miss you so much, and I feel so alone. I love Papi, but he doesn't understand me as you did. I would look at you, and you'd know that something wasn't right. I don't feel like myself anymore. I know that we all miss you, and we each have memories with you that will live with us forever, and I know that's all I have now, but I wish I had more. As I sit here in my room, I'm filled with memories of you sitting on your bed, and it makes me cry because now there's just silence, and it's overwhelming. This isn't how it was supposed to be, and reality hurts. I love you, and I miss you, Mami, and I always will.

I just wanted to let you know that I received an email from the school and I made the President's List as well as Honor Roll. While you were fighting for your life in the hospital, I distracted myself from the pain and sadness that I was feeling with school. I promised you that I would make you proud Mami because you always supported me and encouraged me to do what I wanted to do. God willing I will be graduating early next year with my Bachelor's in English Literature and it's all for you Mami. Mami I miss you. With each passing day the hole inside me that formed when you passed grows bigger and bigger and I feel like I'm drowning in my grief. Nothing is the same without you and I'm having a hard time adjusting and accepting this reality. What kills me every day is the fact that you had faith you were going to come home, and I had faith because of you, and although you did come home, it's not the way I wanted and I know you didn't want it this way either. I hate that I wasn't given the chance to see you and be with you. To have held your hand. To have given you kisses and hugs. To have told you how much I love you, and how much I need you. To have told you how much I appreciate everything that you did for me. To thank you for all of it. This is so hard and I didn't imagine I'd be going through this now. Te amo Mami. Te extraño tanto y sigo pidiéndole a Dios que estés descansando en paz. ❤️*

“ Bendicion Mami,

Mami, to be honest, I don't know what to do without you anymore. We used to do everything together, and now I have to adjust to doing most of them alone. I know I have to try and be strong for everyone, but I don't know how to be strong for myself. I have felt every feeling since you passed, and I don't know which one to allow myself to feel first. I remember the pain I felt when Mother passed away, and Abuelita passed away, but Mami, neither of those hurt as much as losing you. While you were in the hospital, I felt like my body was slowly cracking and splintering, but the day you transitioned to heaven was the most painful. I feel completely and utterly broken, and although I try, my pieces don't fit back together like they used to. I don't know how I will find joy in the things we used to do together. To be writing this to you feels unreal. I keep thinking I will wake up from this nightmare and that it will all have been just that, a nightmare. I miss everything about you, Mami. I miss your laugh. I miss your smile. I miss your smell. I miss your voice. I miss the funny faces, the random dancing, the way you'd rub my neck and cheeks when we sat next to each other. I miss holding your hand when we'd walk together. I miss your positivity. I miss painting your nails and toes. I miss doing your hair. I miss fixing your lipstick. I miss your hugs. I miss talking to you about anything and everything. "Te amo mi Gorda", "Tu eres mi baby", "El rabito de Mami"... I'm going to miss that too. I'm going to miss your cooking. But most of all, Mami, I miss YOU. I want YOU. I want to feel your arms wrap around me and tell me how much you love me. I want to hear you playing with the girls. I want to listen to your singing while you clean, while you cook, while you showered or dressed. I want it all back. You were, are, and will continue to be the greatest mother. I feel honored and blessed that God allowed me to be your child, that I was privileged enough to call you "Mami". You've impacted the lives of so many, Mami, and that brings me a sense of peace because that's just the type of woman you were. You did so much for everyone regardless of their relationship, gender, or association with you. That's something that will never be forgotten. YOU WILL NEVER BE FORGOTTEN. I will carry you with me always, Mami. In everything that I do, and with everything that I was, am, and will become, I will carry you with me. Please give everyone a hug and kiss from me. Te amo. Te extraño. Descanza en Paz Mami, I will see you again one day.

“ Bendición Mami I love you so much and I miss you. I am not ready to let you go and I wish this was all a bad dream. I am going to miss your hugs and kisses and all the delicious food only you knew how to make, I'm going to miss all your positive energy and all the jokes you made to make us laugh but most importantly I'm going to miss the conversations we had and the smile on your face. You always consoled me when I was down and always gave me advice when I was ready to call it quits. I still can't believe you are gone and if I had a second chance at life I would want you as my mother once more. All the things you did for me and my siblings we will never forget, life will not be the same without you and I hope when my time comes you are the one waiting for me with open arms. I love you so so much Mami your strength your intellect your big heart your kindness the lives you've touched will be remembered and cherished forever. You are the greatest mother any person could ask for and you will live in my mind and my heart for all eternity. REST IN HEAVEN WITH YOUR FAMILY MAMI AND I WILL SEE YOU AT THE CROSSROADS.
